

Apologies for the late arrival of July's NW Newsletter. As I set off on the bike a couple of weeks ago for a 1200 mile tour of northern France and Belgium I had a nagging feeling that there was something I should have done first. And this is it.

Blackpool MAG Rally 28th-30th June

A big thanks to all who supported another great Blackpool MAG rally. The sun shone, the music played, the beer flowed and a good time was had by all. Thanks also to Blackpool MAG branch who worked tirelessly over the weekend to make the rally run so smoothly in order to raise funds for the cause.

Last Month – Blackpool Stanley Park Bike Show 7th July

Surprise, surprise – it was cracking the flags again for Blackpool MAG's annual bike show in Stanley Park. Like every year! Now a firm fixture on the north west biking calendar, the show attracts a steady flow of visitors throughout the afternoon as well as lots of intrigued holidaymakers. It also raises a healthy amount for MAG. Thanks again to all who attended.

Next Month – Cum'n Dribble in't Ribble 20, 13-15th September

Almost time to get yerself down to the Whittingham club again for the famous Jesters of Preston rally, now in its 20th fantastic year. The long-time MAG supporting club have got plenty of experience in organising a great weekend, with plenty of decent ale and live music both nights. Tickets are just £18 on the gate. See the poster below for details.

Zero Vision?

Vision Zero finds new ways to contradict itself. Do you remember the phrase "Vision Zero"? This is the concept that by some date in the near future, all deaths and serious injuries can be prevented on the roads of Europe. This has set in motion a whole load of policy measures designed to improve safety on the roads.

Unfortunately, they haven't really thought it through. The very same people who promote Vision Zero also promote cycling and walking. What they seem to have failed to grasp is that cycling and walking are both almost invariably more dangerous than the modes of transport they're meant to replace. In other words, at the same time as they're trying to reduce deaths and injuries, they're trying to get people to use modes which increase them. This lack of logic is absolutely typical of what Colin and Lembit come up against all the time.

It gets worse. The safety fanatics seem to be happy to promote cycling and walking – but they don't extend the same support for powered two wheelers, which are evidently in the same category of low pollution and high efficiency transport. What is to be done? The Political Unit are doing what they always do – using facts and robust evidence to undermine the rubbish being presented all the time in official meetings. MAG always wins the arguments. It's a matter of getting those wins to alter policy. That's not easy but we will continue on this path. If you hear your local politicians discussing Vision Zero or proposing changes to road systems, which often actually increase the risk for bikers, let the Political Unit know at MAG HQ. We'll help to challenge bad policy with good evidence. If necessary, we'll even threaten 3 them with legal action if it looks like they're willing to kill more riders in favour of other road user groups.

Paris bans 2.7 million vehicles to combat air pollution

Paris has banned about a third of the vehicles in the region from entering the capital on weekdays to improve air quality and reduce deaths from particulate pollution. The measures — some of the most restrictive in Europe — come after the publication of a report showing that Paris has higher levels of the pollution than any other EU capital. Under the policy introduced on July 1 by Anne Hidalgo, the city's mayor, diesel cars and vans made before January 1, 2006 have been banned from the capital between 8am and 8pm Monday to Friday, along with all motorbikes and three-wheeled vehicles made before June 30, 2004.

Those who flout the ban face fines of €68 (£63) while lorry drivers can be fined up to €375. A total of 2.7 million vehicles registered in Paris and its suburbs are affected by the ban: one third of all the vehicles in the region, according to AAA Data, a consultancy.

Those vehicles will still be able to drive in the suburbs, at least in the short term, but as soon as they cross the Paris ring road, the Périphérique, to enter the capital, they will be breaching the ban.

Ms Hidalgo says council staff will use CCTV to note registration numbers, to check the age of the vehicles and to send out fines. By 2021 computers will take over the job after the introduction of a system that will automatically read registration plates and issue fines.

Fake insurance alert

Meadowlands Avenue looks much like any other well-to-do area. The gardens of the 11 detached homes on the cul-de-sac are all manicured, the drives are packed with gleaming family cars. You would never guess its residents are the victims of a crimewave that has seen at least 204 phoney motor insurance policies registered there. It is making the lives of residents a misery and putting road users at risk. The fraud works like this. Drivers who want cheap cover are offered a deal by a fake insurance broker. The driver hands over the premium and receives insurance documents showing their car and address details. In reality, however, they have been sold cover tied to an address in a cheaper area, such as Meadowlands Avenue — which has some of the lowest premiums in the country because the drivers there are cautious and low-risk. This Aberdeenshire street is not alone: householders in Norfolk, the Orkneys and the Highlands have also been targeted by scammers.

Ghost brokers, as the scammers are known, simply apply for insurance online and send doctored documents to their unwitting customers. The genuine paperwork, meanwhile, goes to the long-suffering residents of Meadowlands Avenue and other such areas. The motorist may use their car without any problems because it appears — to them and to the police — that they are covered. But if they are in a crash, their cover will be invalid — and it is up to the insurance company to decide whether the drivers involved receive a pay-out. The Ghost brokers usually target motorists who face high premiums, such as the young.

The Association of British Insurers advises buyers to:

- Check the insurance seller has a legitimate website and a UK phone number and address. A genuine broker will not give a mobile as their only contact number.
- Check they are registered with the British Insurance Brokers' Association (biba.org.uk).
- If buying directly from an insurer, check they are a member of the Motor Insurers' Bureau (mib.org.uk).
- If they claim to be a financial adviser, check with the Financial Conduct Authority (fca.org.uk).
- Report suspicious ads to Cheatline via insurancefraudbureau.org/cheatline or on 0800 422 0421.
